Maine's Somerset Before the Red Indian Says Gandhi "Til Die" A Republican Mistake

By Arthur Brisbane

MAINE APPEARS to have gone Democratic. That is the big news this morning. When Maine, home of Neal Dow, Deserter of Sahara dry and Gibraltar of Republicanism, goes Democratic in a wet year, a new anathema is cast from the grave to tell what will probably happen.

To realize the importance of Maine's somersault, you must remember that Maine lacks the great industrial plants, with their tens of thousands of men and women, and is in Pennsylvania and other states.

Wall Street was in a doubtful mood yesterday, something like a child's balloon that can make up its mind whether to go up or come down. Wall Street went down a little, then came up a little. It did not like the news from Maine.

Campers near Elrama, Pa., digging into a hillside, uncovered skeletons of human beings that lived in America thousands of years before the noble Kitchens came, supposedly from Asia. These earlier Americans, according to scientists examining their skulls, had more intelligence than the Indians that followed them. They were "dolicocephalic" which means "long headed" and their skull bones were thin, which indicates that they had been thinking for a long time. But their jaws were heavy and primitive, showing lack of balance.

Invaders from Asia, probably better fighters, wiped them out.

The learned Prof. Darwin, now 82 years old, son of the great Darwin, says our civilization is going to pieces soon if we do not breed a better race of white folk. The kind produced is about ready to go down, as other civilizations have done before us. What we need, according to Darwin, is more sons and daughters with intelligent fathers and mothers, in place of the present plan, which leaves most breeding to the "lower classes."

However, a so-called "flower-child" mother that WANTS a baby, and is ready to nurse it, may be better for civilization than a higher class lady that turns the baby over to somebody else while she fixes her eyebrows and her lips.

Gandhi, strange and sincere Hindu, "immortal" that began September 20, he will strain himself to death unless Britain comes to terms.

Such a threat must puzzle common sense Britons, unusually adept in dealing with subject peoples. There is no knowing what excitement and trouble might arise in India if Gandhi should die of starvation.

Mrs. Fankhurst, and a few other courageous women, willing to go without food, forced women suffrage on England.

The "Legion" was "veterans gathered in convocation at Portland, asking "alteration of artificial aid," demand "bonus and honor."

Any Republican that thought he was helping his party by telling the veterans that when they went to Washington they took more than a thousand criminals with them, and that many of them were not veterans at all, made a mistake. He knows it now.

If your boy is "going out" for athletic honors in his high school, preparatory school, or college, determined to "make this team" or "win that game," he is interested in an insurance survey which shows that college men live long, but THE WHITES AMONG THEM DO NOT COME UP TO THE GENERAL AVERAGE.

He who uses up his heart in early youth with unsuitably violent exercises will not have a good heart to carry him through the 40 or 50 years, "moderate" in everything. You can't use up your heart and have it.

In old days makers of cannon and makers of armor plate had constant war. Armor plate made armor plate that no existing cannon could pierce, and no cannon man could make a cannon that would pierce the armor plate.

Chicago has the same sort of contest between gunmen and payroll protection. The latest payroll protection is a small run containing a gas hidden in the sleeves. The payroll man obeys the order to hold up his hands and, raising his hand, releases the tear gas, using a string attached to a ring on the middle finger.

Elmer Carlson, retired policeman, invented it. He was found meet the situation by wearing gas masks.

The "frying family" George R. Hutchinson, wife and children, who undertook to fly to Europe and landed on Greenland ice coast, have been found alive after their plane crashed. Heaven be praised and thanked. It should not be necessary to suggest that if the father and mother, without the journey, leave their children and the pretty little child behind.

THE BOBBI STARK OF WIFE

EXCLUSIVE LOVE, MYSTERY, DEATH MINGLE

THE HUSBAND
Charles E. DuBois, gem expert, whose story of his wife's death brought about the investigation of the mysterious love triangle and the search for her body, believed slain.

THE OTHER WOMAN
Miss Grace Atwood, the blonde other woman in the strange tale of love and mystery. She is the attractive daughter of a Middleboro manufacturer, one of the wealthiest men on Cape Cod. DuBois admitted his love for her and the girl told the couple had planned to wed. She has been questioned by detectives investigating the strange case and freely told all the details of her romance with DuBois.

THE MISSING WIFE
Mrs. DuBois "sped" DuBois, third in the triangle. Her disappearance from the DuBois summer camp on Great Herring Pond, Plymouth, and the report of her death brought on the inquiry.

STOCKS TUMBLE AFTER RISE

New York, Sept. 14.—Leading shares showed moderate gains in today's dealings on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was at a slow pace and gains were shaded from time to time throughout the session.

Rail shares were leaders in the rise and gains of from 1 to 2 or more points were recorded by Dulles Lackawanna, New York Central and New Haven. Motor shares advanced and Mack Truck showed a gain of over 2 points.

While Motor was 3 points higher on news of the plan to merge with Continental, John Hancock and International Business Machines each showed gains of 2 points or better.

U. S. Steel was over 2 points in the rise, but gave up most of the gain in late trading. Point or better improvements were shown for Pontiac, International Telephone, American Oil, and California, Standard Oil of California, and Allied Chemical.

Stocks started to react in the final period and earlier gains were converted into moderate losses.

Assassin Battles as Guillotine Ends Life

Paris, Sept. 14 (INS)—Paul Gorguloff, assassin of former President Paul Doumer, died on the guillotine for his crime here today. The knife, scheduled to carry out its deadly mission a few minutes earlier, fell at 5:51 a. m., delayed when the man who once strangled his victim, the president, was brought to the guillotine.

There was no demonstration among the hundred civilian spectators who witnessed the execution. The streets outside were jammed with curious persons, mostly women.

When Gorguloff was awakened in his cell in the Sainte Prison, his first words were: "I am not afraid."

Police Get New Clue to Body; Bloodstains Are Found on Body; Chauffeur Vanishes

Other Stories and Pictures on Pages 2, 3 and 6

Police probing the Edith DuBois death mystery announced today that information received by them indicated that the married couple, with whom the missing woman was killed in a triple auto tragedy at Montreal, according to her husband, are still alive.

It was one of several startling developments today as the mystery moved swiftly toward solution.

The couple, according to Police Chief Theobald of Plymouth, are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Butler of Exeter. They are actors and were seen in Plymouth a week ago.

Mrs. DuBois vanished early in August and, according to her husband, Charles DuBois, a wealthy jeweler, was killed in an auto accident with the Butlers soon after Aug. 10.

BODY STILL MISSING

The body of Edith DuBois, whose death the police are seeking to establish as a murder, remains undisturbed.

Developments today included:

1.—Stains found on mattress and strip of coat lining at DuBois' summer camp in Plymouth, are of human blood, Bracton city chemist announces.

2.—Det. Atty. Clegg of Westchester County, N. Y., informs authorities he is coming here with vital information and with letters and papers taken from DuBois' truckhouse, N. Y. home.

New York, Sept. 14.—I am a veteran of the World War. I marched to Washington with the bonus expeditionary force from Portland, Oregon, where for two years I have been unable to find work.

I was with the bonus expeditionary force all the time it was encamped in Washington, D. C., and for a period of that time I was its commander. I think I know as much as any man can know of the purpose and the spirit of the B. E. F. That is why I am taking it upon myself to act as spokesman today.

FLYING NURSE IS OFF AZORES

Madrid, Sept. 14 (INS)—The monoplane American Nurse, which had set out from New York on a nonstop flight to Rome yesterday morning, was forced to land at 5:30 a. m. E. D. T. 1, though a careful watch was being kept at all points.

No continuous news, however, as wireless report from ship which had set out from New York with its three passengers, William Ullrich, pilot; Miss Edna Newcomer, student nurse; and Dr. Leon M. Piccini, indicated that all was going well.

The latest report of the monoplane's progress came in a message from the master of the British steamer Ashburton, who reported that the nurse had been believed to be the American Nurse at 5:30 this morning, approximately 100 miles northwest of the Azores. Daring Pair Cut Wire Grill and Loot Cashier's Office as Hundreds Pass By

Between $20,000 and $21,000 in bills of small denomination were stolen from the cashier's cage of the South Station ticket offices at 8:35 this morning in the largest and boldest robbery of recent years.

In a stroke of amazing daring, two men, who might have been seen by any one of hundreds of work-bound commuters using the station waiting room, forced entrance to the ticket runway, cut through the grill of the cage during the absence of the cashier and vanished with the money into the crowd.

YESTERDAY'S WORKS

A dozen ticket sellers worked at windows within 10 feet of them; men and women hurrying from trains passed with 20 feet of them. An employee of the New Haven railroad even saw them leaving the ticket office and believed for a moment they were bank muggers. Then the cut grillwork of the cage was seen, the money given and the South Station was surrounded by police, but the robbers escaped, perhaps on a train. The money stolen was the property of the public.

THE PRESIDENT'S OVERNIGHT ADJUSTMENT OF THE PEOPLE

CORRESPONDENT'S ARTICLE AFTER BOBBS ARTICLE

Portland, Ore., Sept. 14 (US)—Who cancelled Floyd Gibbons' scheduled broadcast of the American Legion banquet last night—and why?

The rank and file of legionnaires assembled in annual convention here were asking that question today as they became aroused over the sudden cancellation of the noted war correspondent's radio program.

Gibbons was notified of the "change of plans" only a few hours before he was to have taken over the microphone as official announcer for the banquet ceremonies—and only a few hours after a newspaper article by him containing scathing criticism of the Hoover administration's excuse of the evictions of the bonus army appeared in newspapers throughout the country.

Gibbons' newspaper article, which the attorney-general's legal "justification" of the armed evacuation and its array of evidence that some of the bonus marchers had criminal records, is known to have annoyed some Republican leaders in Washington.

Floyd Gibbons ridiculed the "justification" of the armed evacuation and its array of evidence that some of the bonus marchers had criminal records, is known to have annoyed some Republican leaders in Washington.

CABINET FOR TEST

In his article, Gibbons declared that the percentage of illegitimacy in the bonus army was under three per cent, while to quote Gibbons' own words:

"President Harding's own cabinet in which Hoover was secretary of commerce had a higher criminal record than that—least ten per cent of Mr. Harding's cabinet was convicted and sent to the penitentiary and served its time behind bars—and it wasn't for parking in front of five girls either."

Arrangements for Gibbons' appearance as announcer were begun in March when National Commander Henry H. Stevens, Jr., of the American Legion wrote him inviting him to "broadcast to the world again this year."

ACCEPTED POST

On September 4, after Gibbons had accepted, he received a word from his secretary in New York which read as follows:

"Boris Miller (in charge of special advertising for the National Broadcasting Company at New York) advises you are hereby broadcasting from Portland, Ore., Sunday night, Sept. 17, at 8 o'clock, the opening of the convention, and Sunday night, last night, at the national commander's dinner."

Yesterday, however, Gibbons received a wire from John Royal, executive director of the National Broadcasting Company in New York, which read:

"Be very careful about making any editorial comment while on the air."

Gibbons replied that he would, then, early the same afternoon shortly after his article about the bonus marchers appeared in the papers, he was suddenly notified by Radio Station KGW that his broadcasting engagement was cancelled.

Floyd Gibbons said today he came to Portland to broadcast the Legion convention upon the personal and official invitation of the Legion.

How Noninees Stand In Nation-Wide Poll

Washington, Sept. 14 (AP)—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all other Boston morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

FLYING FAMILY TO SAIL HOME

Angmagalik, Greenland, Sept. 14 (INS)—Safe after their adventure with the elements, the "Flying Family" of Hutchinson and their companions commenced preparations to go home here today.

The party of eight owed their lives to the valor of Capt. Thomas Watson of the British trawler Lord Tubb, who found them in a desolate fjord 32 hours after rescuing their first distress signals.

It is believed the Lord Tubb will soon remove the party either to Reykjavik, Iceland, or to Aberdeen, The Danish government is prepared to send a ship for the Hutchinsons if the Lord Tubb found itself unable to transport them.

Fr. Cummins of Roslindale Is 80 Years Old Sunday

Rev. Father John F. Cummins, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church in Roslindale, will celebrate his 80th birthday next Sunday.

Known as the "Grand Old Man" of Roslindale, Father Cummins is a leader in civic and community life, beloved and admired by all who know him.

As pastor of the Sacred Heart Church for 46 years, he has led every movement vital to the welfare of the district. To people of all denominations he has been just "Father John."

Father Cummins was born in Charlestown in 1852, attended Boston College and Holy Cross and was ordained to the priesthood at Troy, N. Y., in 1874. He was a volunteer chaplain in the Spanish War. He distinguished himself during the small pox epidemic in Boston, being the only clergyman to volunteer his services and enter the pest house to administer to the dying patients.

Father Cummins was a hero in the wreck of the Steamer Lewistown when it grounded off Point Judith in 1888 with more than 600 sick soldiers aboard. It was he who brought order to the panic stricken soldiers, with the result that not a life was lost.

REICH SNIBBED BY HINDENBURG

Berlin, Sept. 14 (INS)—President Hindenburg today administered a direct snub to the Reichstag majority which opposed the economic program of Chancellor Von Papen, and attempted to remove the Von Papen ministry from office by a vote of non-confidence Monday afternoon.

Von Hindenburg instructed his secretary to write to Hermann Goerring, Reichstag president, informing him that he (Hindenburg) regards the various resolutions proposed by the Reichstag committee yesterday, denouncing Von Papen as unconstitutional measures as Von Papen has dissolved the Reichstag.

Von Hindenburg declared he did not intend to comply with any of the demands contained in the resolutions.

Von Papen and members of his cabinet have decided to cease the exchange of letters with Goerring.

SAN FRANCISCO GREET'S CURLEY

San Francisco, Sept. 14 (INS)—Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, on a campaign tour for Governor Roosevelt, was greeted today by city officials on his arrival from the American Legion convention at Portland, Ore.

Curley was confident Governor Roosevelt would be elected, declaring "He will sweep the country." The Maine election clinches the situation.

"I can't imagine the campaign closing without a courageous utterance for Roosevelt by Al Smith," Curley said, speaking before the Democratic county central committee.

Mayor Curley said the feeling in the Legion convention was that of much bitterness at the action taken in ordering the bonus army from Washington.

He plans to leave tomorrow for Sacramento.

Fatally Injured

Mrs. Edith M. Dubois of 27 Middle St., Braintree, was fatally injured today in an automobile accident near Boston. The machine went over an embankment and two friends who were riding with her, were killed instantly.

Mrs. Dubois died for 15 hours before being taken to the hospital. She is survived by her husband, Charles Dubois.

State auditors have started their annual check of the books and official records of the City of Braintree, it was announced yesterday.

SHOUSE URGES RUM FOR BOOM

Baltimore, Sept. 14 (AP)—J. Lee Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, told the Advertising Club today that revival of a legalized liquor traffic would aid business and society.

He predicted that 17 states, on repeal, immediately would adopt a form of legal sale.

Shouse estimated a total federal revenue of $12,000,000 from the sale of beer, wine and spirits and a legalized traffic would open large investment opportunities, estimating that $200,000,000 would be required to rehabilitate brewing and malting plants and $50,000,000 for distillery property.

Shouse also said the traffic would engage 100,000 men with $100,000,000 in wages.

BAY STATE SAFE, SAYS WALSH

New York, Sept. 14 (INS)—Senator Walsh of Massachusetts conferred today with James A. Farrow, chairman of the Democratic National Committee and declared that the victory of the Democrats in the Maine State election showed that "Massachusetts is safe for Roosevelt."

Sen. Walsh declined to comment upon reports from Boston that ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith would shortly make an address in New England for the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee.

Two Jailed in Lynn Theft

Two Providence men were sentenced to two months in the House of Correction in Lynn court today, for short-changing a merchant. They are Charles Bennett, 30, and James A. Cassidy, 28.

ILLINOIS MINE WAR REVIVED

Benton, Ill., Sept. 14 (AP)—Franklin County again was under arms today.

Sheriff Robinson's army of special deputies was standing guard on all highways to resist efforts of "shock troops" of the Progressive Miners of America, a newly formed union, to enter the county planning to dislodge United Mine Workers of America men working at the reduced wage scale.

The "shock troops" were reported under way from Gillespie, for a drive against Franklin, Perry and St. Clair counties.

Perry County officials announced an attempt would be made to prevent peaceful picketing there, but Robinson, whose 200 deputy sheriffs once before prevented invasion by striking miners, announced "They're not coming into Franklin County."

JUSTICE STONE QUILTS 2 POSTS

Judge Arthur P. Stone, presiding justice of third district court, East Cambridge, whose stewardship as executor of an aged woman's estate is under fire, has resigned two of his judicial posts, it was revealed today.

Although he is still presiding justice in the Cambridge court, he has relinquished his position as presiding justice of the appellate division of the northern district, and as a member of the administrative committee of the district court.

MAN GUILTY OF CHILD TORTURE

Worcester, Sept. 14—Laddie Houzarak is the only stepchild in a family of seven boys and girls—and being a stepchild is "awful hard" for a girl only 12, she testified today in district court.

Her testimony was against her stepfather, Eugene Houzarak of Milbury st., who is nice to her when she's the girl said, but who tortures her when he is drunk, forcing her to kneel with her bare knees on a pebble-sprinkled floor and to hold strained positions for hours.

During these alleged periods of torture, the girl said, her mother was afraid to come to her assistance.

Judge Ascher placed Houzarak on parole for assault and battery when he gives her the jobs in all school cafeterias.

SCHOOL HEAD'S SON IS OUSTED

A successful battle against employment in a Lynn school cafeteria of Burton Willard, son of a Lynn school principal, earning $1500 a year, while poor boys were denied jobs, was revealed today.

Frederic R. Willard, principal of Lynn English High School, told the board of the head of Principal Edgar M. Copland of Eastern Junior High School, and had young Willard placed back in the job from which Copland had ordered him removed.

Schoolboys who serve as waiters receive free meals and, according to Dr. William Wood of the school board, Willard placed his boy as one of the waiters.

When Principal Copland learned that boys who could not afford to buy lunches had sought this post in vain, he ordered young Willard removed and another boy put in his place.

According to Mrs. Sarah Lynch, head of the cafeteria, Willard, senior, then came to her and requested his son restored to Deputy School Supt. Ernest Stevens and the latter issued an order today that boys who could not afford to buy lunches be given the jobs in all school cafeterias.

Two Firemen Hurt in Springfield Crash

Springfield, Sept. 14 (INS)—Two firemen were seriously injured today when their fire engine crashed through the window of a meat market in an attempt to avoid hitting a battery wagon.

William Balfour, driver, was pinned against the wall of the market and suffered a crushed chest. William H. O'Connell, who was with Balfour, suffered a possible fractured skull.

Driverless Auto Halted on Hill

Edward Mahoney, a rab driver, averted an accident on Beacon st. near Tremont when he stopped a driverless car rolling down the hill into a lane of traffic.

HOMES OF MISSING WIFE AND HER RIVAL

The home of Miss Grace Atwood, blonde daughter of Charles E. Dubois at Rock, a part of Middleboro. Miss Atwood, revealed by the Boston Evening American as the mysterious "Grace Dubois" to whom Dubois transferred his wife's property, is the daughter of Levi O. Atwood, wealthy manufacturer. Jailed N. H. Editor Loses Primary Race

Exeter, N. H., Sept. 14 (AP)—Frank J. MacDonald, editor of the Rockingham County Record, who was jailed when his opponent, Frank E. May, alleged that he had been slandered in MacDonald's weekly newspaper, lost his fight in yesterday's primary for the Republican nomination as registrar of probate. May polled 1335 while MacDonald received 1013.

Cernak F'n Misses Good Sea Abroad

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—Edw. Cernak is "wonderful," but Vivian Graham, 14, granddaughter of Mayor Anton Cernak of Chicago, could hardly wait to get back. Arriving with the mayor, she indicated her first wish was for a "good American ice cream soda."

Hoover's Attack More Cruel Than War, Says
B. E. F. Ex-Head in Plea to People

against us an attack that seems more cruel to us than anything we ever faced in the war.

President Hoover has hundreds to help him. He can call on Atty-Gen. Mitchell. He can send Secretary of War Hurley, Chief of the Veterans Bureau Gen. Hines, and other powerful administration men throughout the country to present his story. We have nobody. We are poor and friendless. While these men were making their fortunes and building their careers behind the front-line trenches, we were fighting in those trenches to save this country... or trying to gain a foothold after the war.

Many of us are sick. Most of us haven't even a decent suit of clothes in which to present ourselves to our neighbors. We look the part. Yet any man has a right to defend himself, even though he is in rags. And our good name is as dear to us as though we, too, sat in the White House.

Verdict Put Up to People of Country
There is only one court to which we can now turn and that is to you—the people of America. We ask you to listen.

We do not plead for your sympathy or your gratitude. We are not playing politics—not trying to argue for a bonus now. We are only asking for fair play... For the square deal you would demand for any poor devil who was getting the worst of it in an unequal contest.

Regardless of your party or your prejudice, will you listen to the side of the case?

President Hoover and Attorney-General Mitchell have made the bonus expedition look like a gigantic plot to undermine the government and yep the American people.

They have said we were largely "an aggregation of criminals," "mostly impostors," "they have tried to arouse your anger against us, saying that we sought 'special privilege without regard for the other millions of unemployed.'"

No Plot or Crime in Bonus Army's Drive
These things are not true. We were not plotters, criminals, impostors, panhandlers, we forgot their unfortunate brothers.

We were the men who worked beside you down in the shop, in the fields, on the highways, and painted your houses and sold you shoes and harvested your crops.

When the fellows who grew up with you, joined the lodge with you and who married the year you did and who went through Hell with you in the war, they're no romance or glory to you, let alone.

We committed no crime, made no plot. But we have become poor. Poverty—that is our only sin.

Many of you know what poverty is, if those fellows in Washington don't. Many of you lost your jobs when we lost ours. Many of you saw your car go, and your home go, and your ranch go, and your insurance lapse because you couldn't keep up the installments or the taxes.

Plight of Veterans Common in Country
Some of you saw your old mothers and your wives suffer because you couldn't afford an operation—saw some of them die and you didn't even have money to pay for a decent funeral. And many of you saw your little kids get white and spindly because you couldn't buy the right food and clothes, and had to live on hand-outs from other folks as poor as yourself.

These things happened to some of you, and they happened to us. They happened to us all together. That's why we started to march.

We didn't have any dark design against the government and any mysterious scheme. We came because we were broke. We came as any man would come if he were broke, try to cash in on the only thing we had left, our compensation certificates.

Today, they're even holding it against us because we had those compensation certificates. But we didn't ask for bonus when we went to war. We didn't expect it. We went to war because we loved our country and they told us it was in danger. And this bonus business was part of the big political ballyhoo that came after. If the bonus is wrong—if the bonus robs the government, please remember that it was the government who promised it to us and gave part of it to us. We came to ask for the other part.

Courtesy and Cash for Business Leaders
We came because we were broke—that was all. We came to the place where we thought we had a right to come. If any man has a right to come to Washington and ask for help, it should be us who protected Washington.

Others were coming. We weren't the only people "lobbying for special interests" at the capital. There were thousands of others there—making no secret of it. The bankers were there and the railroad men and the automobile men and the oil men. They were all there and they were all asking for special consideration to help them through the emergency. They were all getting a polite reception at the White House—AND from the State and War DEPT. PROPRATIONS THEY ASKED.

Nobody calls them criminals today because they asked for help. But they slept in swivel chairs and we slept in the cold. That was the difference.

But there was one point where there wasn't any difference between us. We were all citizens as you are... We can vote this November as well as they. The administration has just remembered that.

Bonus Needed to Help Save Nation
We were broke. That's why we came. We weren't just thinking of ourselves as we came. We didn't go to Washington merely to get help for our wives and mothers and little kids.

We went to get help for all the folks back home. We went to get help for the folks who couldn't march.

That bonus wouldn't have stayed in our pockets. It would have paid the grocers and the doctors and the school teachers and the clerks.

We were marching to help save America. A lot of people will laugh when they hear us say that. They didn't laugh when we said it back in 1917—when we marched in new uniforms with the bands playing and everybody making a fuss over us. They'll laugh now because we're in rags and we're getting old and there's no romance or glory to you, let alone.

Washington Unaware of Country's Plight
But America needs saving as much now as it did then. Maybe it needs it more. And we marched to do our bit to save it!

Perhaps we shouldn't have done it. Perhaps we should have waited and left all that up to the President. But we had waited for three years and what had he done?

For three years—all of us—had been going through hell. The President didn't know what that hell was like. Secretary Hurley and Atty-Gen. Mitchell and Gen. Hines and Mellon and Mills didn't know what it was like. They can make surveys and speeches about poverty BUT THEY DON'T KNOW WHAT IT IS—not really.

None of those big men in Washington know what the rest of us have been going through. That's why they weren't doing anything—

And so at last we marched. We got sick of waiting and we marched. And we marched decently and in order. And we lived decently and in order while we were in Washington. They say our camps stank. They say we slept on rubbish and ate scraps.

Whose fault was that? We marched because we couldn't wait any longer. And we stayed because we had no place else to go. We were kicked from the State and War DEPT. offices as we knew it. But we thought something might happen—

We couldn't believe America would let us down. Even when President Hoover threatened that he'd veto the bill even if Congress passed it... and even when the Senate turned it down... We still couldn't believe that we wouldn't come.

They say we deliberately misled our congressmen. That isn't so either.

Saw Hope of Extra Session of Congress
We knew it was both possible and legal to call an extra session of Congress in time of emergency. We thought if we stayed wives and mothers and little kids.

And then they drove us out. They drove us out, though they didn't need the land and they weren't using the buildings where we camped—though our food, such as it was, was being sent in by friends and we weren't costing Washington a dollar.

They drove us out with guns and bayonets and tanks and tear gas, and it was a dirty deal. But it wasn't as dirty a deal as this—to hit us when we're down. To take away the only thing we have left—our decent march.

And we're telling you THIS, you people of America—Our fight is your fight. Our rights are your rights and you better protect them for your own sake and the sake of the Republic.

There is getting to be less and less consideration for any plain citizen's rights in the Washington of today.

American English Outmoded British
London, Sept. 14 (AP)—It seems the "okay" folks outnumber the "rather, old" folks. Lloyd Jones, phonetic expert, says more people talk American English than British English in the world today. He forecasts radical changes in the language, making it "a strange compromise between the American and the British English and future American English."

GLASSFORD IN NEW CHARGE
AT HOOVER

Washington, Sept. 14—Brie, Gen. William D. Glassford, superintendent of police, fired another blast today at the administration's castigation of the B. E. F.

By the administration's barrages against him, Glassford stuck to his guns, determined to ask for federal troops to meet the tattered bonus marchers and deftly added:

"With the great majority of the unemployed veterans, willing to co-operate with the police and with no order to extend the repossessed area, I am firmly of the belief that no situation would have arisen beyond the control of the police."

Glassford's new statement was a bold challenge to President Hoover, who had been made to the Commissioners to dismiss Glassford. Among hundreds of congratulatory messages reaching Glassford today was a telegram from Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, saying the police chief had "set a fine example to every public official in America."

Although President Hoover was reported incensed, it was said at the White House that no aggressive had been made to the Commissioners to dismiss Glassford. A telegram from Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, saying the police chief had "set a fine example to every public official in America."

VETS' CONDUCT
FAULTLESS

By HENRY L. STEVENS
National Commander of the American Legion
(Written Especially for Universal Service)

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc., Portland, Ore., Sept. 14 (US)—This parade in which approximately 100,000 Legionnaires marched, and have convinced every single individual who viewed it that the malicious and unfounded accusations made in former years as to drunkenness and disorderly conduct were untrue.

There was not one single marcher who passed the reviewing stand, and every one of them was within 30 feet of me, who showed the slightest evidence of ever having had a drink, much less of being intoxicated.

It was a most wonderful and magnificent parade. They were the old boys who went over the top, who fought the American way of fighting in the open, who fought the trenches, the hardships of the trenches, the discipline of the training camps.

And then they drove us out, though they didn't need the land and they weren't using the buildings where we camped—though our food, such as it was, was being sent in by friends and we weren't costing Washington a dollar.

DARING THIEVES FOR $20,000 FROM SOUTH STATION

erty of the Boston Terminal Co., which leases the South Station to the New Haven and Boston & Albany railroads and operates the ticket office.

The currency comprised the receipt from yesterday's sale of tickets and the loss is suffered by the Terminal Co., because the funds had not yet been turned over to the railroad.

The robbers, apparently well acquainted with the system of the office, forced entrance to an outside door leading to the ticket room, cut a hole in the wire grid work of the cashier's cage door and one of them inserted his hand to spring the snap lock and slide back the door.

A bundle of $10,000 taken from an open safe in the cage, between $200 and $300 in loose bills on a tray, a safe of the safe, and $300 from the drawer and top of the cashier's desk comprised the loot.

The robbers left behind about $500 in silver and $200 in gold and Canadian money which had been set aside.

WAITED TO STRIKE
The cashier's office, entirely enclosed by steel grill work, is on the street floor of the station at the north end of the block of ticket windows, where the public can see the cashier and the main waiting room.

It is visible from two ticket windows opening on the waiting room, and the robbers believed that the movements of Cashier Thomas J. McDonnell had been under observation from a point near the time when they waited until the time was exactly "right" before making their bold strike.

Two men had been noticed lurking near the ticket office a month ago and one was seen yesterday, police learned. Earlier, they were seen in the concourse and in the waiting room near the windows from which the cashier's office is visible.

EASILY OPENED
From these windows it is a distance of about only 15 feet to the door opening into the ticket room from the short passageway between the concourse and waiting room.

This door is kept latched and opened only by the cashier himself with a buzzer arrangement in response to the ringing of a bell. However, it could easily have been opened by use of a celluloid strip, police demonstrated.

From the door, the cashier's office is only a few feet. Near the door and the money cage in the foot of a spiral staircase leading to the auditing department and washroom a half story above.

The time of the daring stroke was chosen after the morning hour when the flow of commuters through the station reaches its maximum and four hours before the funds were to have been collected by bank messengers.

LOCKED SLIDING DOOR
A few minutes after 8:30, Cashier McDonnell, whose home is in Richmond Rd., Mattapan, left his cage to go to the washroom upstairs. He walked up the stairs with William Briggs of Providence, traveling auditor for the company.

He locked neither the safe nor the door, but security fastened the sliding door of the cage.

With Briggs he mounted the spiral stairs, apparently while under the shelter of the waiting criminal, who must have cashed doubly secure.

SAW MEN LEAVING
McDonnell and Briggs separated on the floor of the ticket office and only a few minutes later, while McDonnell was taking his monthly in the washroom, Briggs descended the stairs.

The auditor saw two men leaving the vicinity of the cage and had a good view of them. They carried bags and he thought they might be bank messengers until they had vaulted through the doorway into the station proper, when he noted the door of the cashier's cage was open and McDonnell was not yet downstairs.

He called "McDonnell! McDonnell!" from the foot of the stairway and the cashier appeared at the top of the stairs.

"Your door is open," Briggs said.

NO CLUE TO ESCAPE
"How could it be? I left it closed," McDonnell said, dashing down stairs.

It took but an instant to note that a robbery had been committed and a few moments more to notify police. Railroad detectives were on the scene in the police house, but no clue to the direction taken by the robbers was turned up.

TRAINING SHIP COME FROM LONG TRIP

Bearing the marks of Thursday's storm, through which she sailed her way from 118 miles off Montauk Point, the 56-year-old Nantucket, the Massachusetts national training school ship, put in at the Boston navy yard, her 31 cadets safe and glad to be home again. She had had three hours washed away during the storm, which reached, according to Capt. C. A. Abbe, commanding her, "hurricane proportions." Machinery's Mate J. J. Logan had his right arm scalded in the engine room during the storm.

SKIFFER FRAMES SHIP
Capt. Abbe, however, was proud in his praise of his ship, which was re-rigged as a bark before this voyage, which started May 21 this year.

"She is the most seaworthy craft that I ever sailed in," he said, "and rode like a cork."

He estimated the wind velocity as from 80 to 100 miles per hour, and said that they tried to keep the ship head on to the storm, in order to take it on the bow, the strongest part of the hull.

Three boats were washed away from the ship, and a number of lifelines about midships were broken away from its lashings and against the chart house. About three feet of the sparboard were lost to the extent that the crew had to prevent her being flooded and swamped. They finally succeeded in releasing the motor launch, and it held until the storm was over. We had a leak in the port scupper and the water sprang up on deck and the boys were put to work bailing it.

RADIO AFFECTED
The main radio set was put out of service by salt water. The Nantucket touched at Provincetown and Norfolk on her way down cruise before starting on the storm. She touched at Ponta Delgada, in the Azores; Plymouth, England; Amsterdam, Holland; Copenhagen, Denmark; Gothenburg, Sweden; Hull, England; Gibraltar, Malta; and Madeira. This completes the network for the cadets for the current year.

LYNN FACTORY PROBE STARTS

Commissioner Edward S. Smith of the State Department of Labor and Industries has notified Mayor Manning of Lynn today that he will send agents to investigate alleged immoral conditions in Lynn shoe factories. The agents will check up on stories that girls workers receive inadequate pay.

Reports were made to Mayor Manning recently that many young women shoe workers, who declined offers of their employers had been forced to work for four and five cents an hour and that some of them had earned as a consequence, as low as $1.50 a week.

COUPLE, 'KILLED' IN DU BOIS AUTO DEATH STORY, SEEN ALIVE A WEEK AGO IN FOXBORO

His co-worker, Joseph Ferreri, rushed into the investigation to co-operate with Detective Fleming and Brault.

Larry Fraser, former chauffeur for Mrs. DuBois, grumbled for Mrs. DuBois, left home at 3 a. m. today, mysteriously, with unidentified man who he called for him in an auto.

—DuBois auto taken from his chauffeur garage during the night. Officials postpone plan to visit court next morning on foundation of this garage in court for the body.

—DuBois' alleged attempt to sell his wife's $5000 wrist watch for $1000 to a Quincy man.

—Officials promised suit denouement, after viewing of secret film.

The surveillance of the widespread investigation was established today in Dedham at the office of Asst. Dist. Atty. John V. Sullivan.

SEEK THE BUTTLERS

Leaders in the investigation met here after while Sullivan pointed out new information, putting everything else in the background, had been obtained and should solve the mystery.

It was believed to relate to the discovery of the Butlers of Foxboro.

State Detective Slick and Ferreri were called hurriedly from duty at the Brockton Fair to sit in the conference.

When it ended Slick and Detective Michael Fleming went to Braintree in question Larry Fraser, who was called by Sullivan, launched a search for the Butler couple.

Shortly afterward Sullivan received a call from New York in which Dist. Atty. Corne said he had such a mass of important information, including the discovery of the Butler couple, that he felt it imperative to come to Dedham tonight.

Corne said his facts were too lengthy to discuss over the telephone.

CHAUFFEUR VANISHES

The disappearance of Walter Durfee, Mrs. DuBois' chauffeur, from his home early this morning seemed as one of the leading features of the investigation.

His mother, Mrs. J. Durfee, who is 78 years old, revealed it, who he reached his home, was at Middle and Union sts., Braintree, not far from the DuBois home, at 3 a. m.

He was in bed only about an hour.

The doorman, Durfee, talked with a man and then told his mother he was going away. Neighbors noticed they left in a small, new automobile. Durfee did not say who the man was, but called for him.

While police were combing their pursuit of a dozen important angles of the mystery, with continued search for the body, which is necessary to establish that a murder was committed—DuBois' lawyer revealed that his too, is making an investigation.

This lawyer, City Solicitor Jeremiah J. McAnaney of Quincy, who argued in the famous Sacco-Vanzetti case, declared:

"I want to give my own perspective, my own premises, before doing anything. I am working on a lead now that the police knows nothing about."

McAnaney said he expected to see DuBois today. DuBois has not been living in his Braintree home since released Monday after hours of grilling, but he is said to have been living elsewhere on the South Shore.

ENTERTAINED BLONDE

Sullivan went to Foxboro to launch search for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Butler, whose presence there since Mrs. DuBois died was revealed by Foxboro police.

Investigating officials said they felt sure that these are the Butlers referred to by DuBois in his story of the auto accident, although this point remains to be proved.

It was also learned that when Mrs. DuBois' disappearance the Butlers entertained guests at their Foxboro home, including, it is said, DuBois and his sweetheart, Grace Atwood.

Miss Atwood, who is 25 and lives at 20 E. a. a. of Middleboro was revealed exclusively yesterday by the Boston Evening American as his mysterious blonde who planned to marry DuBois.

She is the daughter of one of the wealthiest residents of Middleboro. She told police her story of her romance with DuBois and asserted that he told her his wife died in an auto accident.

Revealing their purpose to return to Larry Fraser, who was DuBois' chauffeur and part-time driver for Mr. and Mrs. DuBois, police said that on Monday, Sept. 11, he was at Plymouth for grilling. Fraser was given permission to go to lunch and failed to return.

It was Fraser who brought Mrs. DuBois' auto from New York last weekend. This is the auto, a tan with New York number plates, which disappeared from the DuBois garage in Middle St., Braintree, early today.

John Mahar, one of the tenants in the DuBois home in Middle St.,

HUNT DEATH CLUE IN HAIR

he had been killed in an auto accident. He seemed all broken up about it and I sympathized with him and did my best to comfort him."

At this point Miss Atwood admitted she had then mailed the letter to him referring to the "last obstacle" to their marriage being removed.

"A day later," she said, "DuBois asked me to keep him company at the camp. We stayed there for more or less than he had to go to New York on business. He asked me to go along and we went to his place at Tuckahoe."

It was while we were there that he arranged to transfer his assets to me. That was on Sept. 8. I signed the registration blank as Mrs. Grace DuBois."

SOBS OUT STORY

Here the young woman broke down and burst into sobs. She explained the reason she had signed in this way was because she had expected to become the jeweler's wife soon.

She told the officers she had been with DuBois in Tuckahoe from Labor Day until Sept. 8. She also admitted the property in Braintree and Quincy had been transferred to her under the name of Grace DuBois.

Police believe the name of Edith DuBois on these transfers was forced by the husband. They admit they have unearthed no evidence to back her belief as yet.

Another discovery yesterday was made by Carlton Wright, of Plymouth. He was standing in his sailboat in the harbor at the foot of Sandwich st. As he pulled up the mooring rope he found strands of long dark hair clinging to it.

TOEN AT ROOTS

They were turned over to state officials. State Detective Brault considered the find highly significant and sent the hair sample to City Chemist George Bowling, of Brockton, for analysis. The latter reported they were undoubtedly human hair.

As a result officers went to the DuBois camp and secured a number of combings of the missing woman's hair. These will be compared with the hair found in the harbor.

Officials point out the strands found in the harbor were apparently torn out by the roots by contact with the mooring rope. It was pointed out that the high tides and winds of last week might carry the body in the direction of the harbor if it had been disposed of in that manner.

It was also learned today that the missing woman was cognate of her husband's friendship with Miss Atwood. According to Benjamin Heinsohn, whose wife was a close friend of the missing woman, and whose suspicions and complaints led to the police he said he sat up to watch if anybody came for the automobile. But he fell asleep, and when he awoke, the car was gone.

Living in the home, besides Mr. and Mrs. Mahar, are Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

Police revealed today that the two women were shaken by the early today officers gathered at the garage of this house to rip apart the cement foundation, which was laid recently, during the absence of the Mahar and that they hoped, temporarily this plan was shelved, but the police remained on hand to start on a woman's notice.

Three days later he told me

NEW CLUE TO BODY

The house is in an isolated location. The nearest building is a big old deserted mansion. On the other side is a pond.

Shortly after midnight a mysterious "tip" was received by the investigating investigators which led to today's search for the body. Officials would not disclose what was disclosed but the Boston Evening American learned that they hoped, as a result of the "tip," to be led to the body.

City Chemist George Bowling of Brockton has three crime exhibits before him for expert analysis which resulted in the announcement that there were human blood stains on the mattress and coat lining.

The third exhibit was the hank of human hair found in Plymouth Bay by a Boston broker. The hair had become entangled in the mooring line of his boat. Attached to the hair was a piece of rope about a foot and a half long.

Bolling said the mattress would be carefully examined for possible future use by the state. It was found in the DuBois cottage, which is on the shore of Great Herring Pond, where dredging was again in progress today.

The strip of coat lining is a piece of canvas found near the cottage. Bolling said it might indicate the age of the stains but said they were at least two weeks old but not very old.

He was unable to say without further examination of the hair whether it had ever been dyed.

BLONDE TELLS STORY

Officials also said today they had gained considerable information from their talk with Miss Atwood.

The officers told her father who they were and said they wished to talk with her. He led her into the room, introduced her to the officers and asked her to tell the truth. Throughout her talk she appeared to be honest and hysterical and on one occasion broke down and sobbed convulsively.

"I met Mr. DuBois in New York about a year ago," she told the officers. "He was at a private social function. He impressed me deeply and appeared to be well bred and refined, and took an immediate liking to each other."

"For several days after that he took me to show grilles and parties. Sometimes we were alone and sometimes there were

DISCREPANCIES BARED

As far as could be learned there had been no trouble about the matter and Mrs. DuBois had indicated her willingness to step aside and let her husband have his freedom if he wished it.

The check-up of DuBois' story by State Detective Michael Fleming also revealed a new discrepancy in the jeweler's story. Fleming learned yesterday that DuBois went to the office of James Flavin, Quincy real estate man, and asked him to acknowledge two deeds.

They were signed by his wife and DuBois said she was in Montreal at the time and he wished the deeds acknowledged at once as a favor to one of the properties. Flavin did so and DuBois returned on Aug. 6 to report his wife had been killed in an auto accident and the body cremated.

Police have established Mrs. DuBois was last seen alive on the night of Aug. 8. To questions by investigators DuBois has persisted in his story his wife left on her trip on Aug. 10.

He told the incident was reported to police last night by Charles DeGraze of Plymouth.

He told officers he saw a couple swimming far off shore in the morning. Pond and had sailed toward them through curiosity.

NEAR EXHAUSTION

They proved to be Mr. and Mrs. DuBois and he said the woman was almost exhausted. He hailed both abroad and said that DuBois had remarked unconcernedly that he "guessed they swam too far out."

DuBois, who is 46, according to his brother Jules, is an excellent swimmer and always keeps in good physical condition. DuBois was 45 and would be 46 early next October.

Another person who will be questioned today is Charles Swannick, a retired salesman who was frequently in the company of Grace Atwood, but denied her friendship. Until he introduced her to Charles DuBois, one of his closest friends. Seen at his home by a Boston American representative, Swannick laughed when asked if he had not been a sweetheart of Grace.

"Why, that is far-fetched," he said. "I simply had a parental interest in Grace. I enjoyed her company and I saw her very frequently. You know she was a most interesting person. She was different, she liked nature, she played the piano and she was a most interesting student of history."

"You know there is a beautiful group of lakes a short way from down there at sunset and sit in the middle of a natural roadway that connects Lakes Assawamisset and Little and Big Quitticus. Frequently I would get my car last year and run down and get Grace and we would get out there at sunset time and sit for hours watching the beauties of nature."

DANCED OFTEN

"Frequently I took Grace to a dance. Yes, it was the same dance hall that Charles DuBois and Grace went to this year."

"I spoke to Grace several times about her keeping company with Charles because of my interest in her and because I thought she should be told."

"I just discussed it in a casual way, of course. It was no lecture and I remember she answered me once by saying, 'Yes, I suppose it is ludicrous, or something like that and then we passed the matter off as being a body creamed.'"

DuBois, who is 46, according to his brother Jules, is an excellent swimmer and always keeps in good physical condition. DuBois was 45 and would be 46 early next October.

Another person who will be questioned today is Charles Swannick, a retired salesman who was frequently in the company of Grace Atwood, but denied her friendship. Until he introduced her to Charles DuBois, one of his closest friends. Seen at his home by a Boston American representative, Swannick laughed when asked if he had not been a sweetheart of Grace.

"Why, that is far-fetched," he said. "I simply had a parental interest in Grace. I enjoyed her company and I saw her very frequently. You know she was a most interesting person. She was different, she liked nature, she played the piano and she was a most interesting student of history."

THE FACT THAT GRACE IS SEEN

Charlie more frequently than we this year made absolutely no difference in our friendship. After all I am old enough to be her father."

"I will admit that I was suspicious that her continual association with Charlie would cause her to be of use before it was over. I simply have my suspicion of the fact that nine out of ten such affairs do cause me to be suspicious."

DUBOIS FAMILY RICH

It was also learned today that DuBois is a member of one of the most prominent families in New Jersey. His father, the late Jules DuBois, was one of the early mayors of Ridgefield, N. J. His also was one of its wealthiest and most influential residents and for years considered a power in state politics. It was also a large New York property holder, at one time being the owner of a chain of buildings directly opposite where the Rocky Theater now stands.

It was learned today that DuBois had completed for the last year that he had net $10,000 in a furniture business into which he ventured three years ago. Eveninging told an Evening American reporter of this loss today.

MAINE'S RECORD VOTE REDUCE TO HOOVER

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Portland, Me., Sept. 14.—Struggling record from small towns and plantations in the Maine section failed to change in the slightest the Democratic victory which carried the party candidates for Governor and in two congressional races to success.

Economic conditions and President Hoover's alleged ineptitude were the controlling causes of the extraordinary and unprecedented overturn which gave to the Democrats their surprising victory in Maine.

Democratic majorities were given decided boosts today in a recital of tabulations and addition of two small towns.

Louis J. Brann, first Democratic elected Governor in 18 years, increased his lead over Burton Martin to 248.

The Democratic winners in the second and third congressional districts, Edward C. Tamm and John G. Utterback, also gained over their Republican opponents.

Cong. John E. Nelson and Joseph G. Brewster, while the advantage of Republican Congressmen Carroll L. Sledge—sole victor of the overhauling of the tariff was trimmed considerably.

The congressional contests in Maine, 2202; Utterback, 1371; Sledge, 1581.

Only 13 small upstate towns and plantations were missing. The poll in those places could not change the totals materially.

POLITICAL KEYNOT

That the Maine election was nothing short of a political revolt may be seen from the fact that it was the first time since 1892 that a Republican Governor was elected in Maine.

1—The Democrat, Louis J. Brann, was elected Governor against the majority of from 35,000 to 50,000 that have been customary to the Republican candidates for Governor in Presidential years.

2—A majority of Maine's representation in the national House of Representatives was elected Democrat for the first time in two generations.

3—The people of Maine went the whole distance in the astonishing Democratic trend by electing Democratic candidates to county offices which they had rarely, if ever, held before.

When Senator Moses of New Hampshire said there was no nothing to be offered for the President, he probably had in mind the volume of the vote cast. More than 235,000 men and women of Maine voted in the polls.

There was such a heavy vote for Governor, it exceeded more than 20,000 the vote cast four years ago when the Democratic nominee was slaughtered by a majority of 83,000.

The Democratic sweep was described as a defeat for the "drive" by the Rev. Frederick W. Loring, superintendent of the Civic Christian League of Maine, prohibition organization.

The Democratic candidates for Governor and the three congressional seats, all campaigned an out-and-out repealists.

For 75 years with but few recessions Maine has had a state prohibitory law and has been known as "The Birthplace of Prohibition."

The Republican party has constantly stood for support of the Eighteenth Amendment and the state convention this year decided opposition to "new form of repeal or modification."

Mr. Smith called upon prohibitionists to "rev. definite plans from now on that shall lead to a decisive victory in two years."

UNIFORM VOTE SHIFT

The politicians of Maine agree that the "reverse vote" has been for two generations reliable and overwhelming a Republican vote. The voters came out in greater numbers than ever before to the vote. There was no distinction between rural and the urban communities.

The condition which caused this result seem to be obvious. State farmers are offered only 35 cents a barrel for their potatoes, when probably cost $1 to plant, feed, and pack for market. The vast lumber industry has been stagnated as the result of the failure to protect pulp in a tariff which has protected the mechanical equipment which the farmers and lumbermen must buy. Coastal shipping had fallen away and the textiles had suffered the lapse of business common to other industries.

MORE HELP FOR SEARS, ROEBUCK

The personnel of the Sears, Roebuck retail organization, numbering in the neighborhood of 15,000 in the 300 stores, has been increased by preparations for the company's celebration of its 40th anniversary, according to a message received today by C. C. Williams, manager of the Boston district, from J. M. Barker, vice-president of the company in charge of retail administration.

As many of the new employees will be retained after the anniversary as full business will permit officials declare.

"It would be interesting to figure out just how many people have been given employment as a result of this one event promoted by one company," said Manager Williams.

"Of course the $250,000 spent in the special anniversary campaign has been paid for by the company, but the thousands of jobs created by the event, for the most part, in excess of what the normal fall buying of the company would have been."

Footwork Wins in Maine

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

Got to hand Gene Tunney credit for gabbing Maine by the ears and holding on until it went Democratic.

Gene just finished a campaign tour in that state. He hopped from stump to stump swinging both hands. There was no backslapping. Anything the champion said was endorsed by the majority.

Where did Tunney learn to be such a good talker? Why, arguing in that state, where he was born, and where he won his famous fight with Jack Dempsey in 1926.

If you remember Gene's fights there were no smelly slaps in the face with the contents of a public library. He used the same logic in Maine, which went Democratic for the first time in 18 years.

There are some incorrigible Republicans who claim Gene's Maine audience were impressed by his footwork and his shadow boxing.

Looks like Gene is in line for a good job. The least he should get is the post of official kick down time keeper in Roosevelt's cabinet.

DO NOT FIGHT LOST BROWN NAMED FOR BATTLE WITH MOSES

By the Associated Press

Major for signs of November trends, political leaders today scanned results of yesterday's eight state primaries, watched Georgia Senator Charles McNary, and pondered Monday's Democratic victory in Maine of season election.

Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire and Senator Porter Dale of Vermont were named by Republicans.

In Vermont Republicans again named Stanley C. Wilson for the Governor's chair and Ernest W. Gibson for Congress. Gibson's favored re-election of the prohibition question against a repeat opponent.

In New Hampshire, Democrats elected Fred H. Brown to oppose Senator Moses in November. Rep. William H. Rogers, a Democrat, was renominated and will be opposed by William F. Straw, Republican.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, four-term victor again, was named by Democrats in South Carolina over former Senator Col. C. B. Davis.

Michigan returns indicated renomination of all present representatives Congress. Rep. George W. Wolcott and Seymour H. Perren, Republicans, apparently had won the nomination over Louis E. Cramton and Grant M. Hudson, former leading prohibitionists in the House.

With the backing of Senator Huey P. Long, Representative John H. Overton won the Democratic senatorial nomination in Louisiana from Senator Edwin H. Thomas. Long's state led throughout the State.

In Washington Senator Wesley L. Jones, sponsor of the "five and ten" prohibition enforcement law, was holding a narrow lead in the election. There was apparently no real contest. The vote was heavy and counting slow.

Colorado Democrats gave John T. Barnett a slight lead over Alva Adams in the senatorial race on the face of early returns. A record-breaking vote was recorded. Karl C. Schuyler topped Neale C. Warren in the Republican senatorial contest.

MOORE LEADS HUNT. In Arizona B. B. Moore took an early lead on Democratic ballots over the veteran W. P. Hunt for the gubernatorial nomination which was expected to be tantamount to election. J. C. Kinney was ahead in the Republican contest for the same office.

Today in Georgia Rep. Charles E. rip, legislative veteran, cracks a Democratic senatorial nomination.

DOE AND SISTER WIN IN N. H.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 14 (AP)—A brother and sister, who served together in the state House of Representatives, stood nominated today for the state Senate.

Miss Jessie Doe of Rollinford won the Republican nomination in the 21st District over Senator Frank F. Fernald and former Senator George L. Leighton.

Her brother, Haven Doe, of Somersworth, was nominated by the Democrats in the 20th District. He was unopposed.

Miss Doe, a graduate of the University of New Hampshire, was the first woman to sit in the New Hampshire House.

BANQUETS POPULAR

Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the Democratic Club of Boston, says that one of the good signs within the party this year is the size of the outturnings for the various organization banquets.

WOMEN TO RALLY

The National and Professional Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts, Mrs. Florence H. Leighton, president, will hold a rally at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, Saturday at 10 a. m., when Republican candidates will speak. Super will arrive at 5.

RALLY FOR KIERMAN

Hugh Kierman, candidate for state senator in the district comprising Wards 1, 2 and 3, will hold a rally at Dover St. and Shawmut Ave., South End, at 9 o'clock tonight.

TWO INDORSE BATES

David J. Bates, candidate for the Republican nomination for Legislator in the 10th District, received the endorsement of Mrs. Louis A. Wood, president of the Women's Educational Progressive Club of Boston and of Raymond P. Bates, president of the State, Mrs. Bates' husband, Ralph Bates of Boston.

Fat Men

I don't care how fat you are or how old you are, if you will use one half box of Florenz Ziegfeld's "The Great Singing" every morning before breakfast for 10 days, and cut down on pastries, you will be in better shape than you are now.

You will feel good—no more gas and the urge for activity will be so great that you will energetically and daily wash of several miles—and lose fat.

While you are losing fat you will be gaining in energy—in endurance—in ambition. Your skin will grow tighter and your eyes will sparkle with the good health that comes from using Florenz Ziegfeld's "The Great Singing."

Doctors Watch Tack Inside Baby's Body

New York, Sept. 14.—(INS)—At intervals of two hours, doctors today gazed into 19-month-old Peter Charles's body, made transparent by X-rays, and watched the process of a tack which the child swallowed.

At Jamaica hospital, physicians said they made Patricia eat "mush and potatoes in the hope the tack would be included in the soft mass and pass from the body without hurting it."

Teachers Warned To Do Better Work

New Bedford, Sept. 14.—Fifteen New Bedford teachers have been warned by Rupt. Allen P. Keith that they must show decided improvement in their teaching before February or lose their jobs. It was revealed today. This is the first time in the history of New Bedford that such a wholesale warning has been issued.

'CORPUS DELICTI' PHRASE RECALLS THRILLING TALE OF 'LEGALIZED MURDER'

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I HAVE BEEN TRYING to recollect when I first heard "corpus delicti," which is law Latin for the "body of the crime" or, to be blunt, the corpse in a case where murder is suspected.

My memory was jogged by the recent use of the phrase in a news story. You so seldom see it in a newspaper—or, indeed, anywhere for that matter—that it filled the faculties a bit more sharply than the ordinary police story.

Thomas Huxley, that grand old man of the 19th century science, who, incidentally, was one of the finest popularizers of his age, was fond of using a comparison of testimonial and circumstantial evidence in his lectures on paleontology. What Edgington is to the "expanding universe" of today, Huxley was to the Darwinian hypothesis of sixty or seventy years ago.

Phrase Recalls Thrilling Tale

His subject was paleontology and he used to say that he believed the truth of Evolution could be proved from the fossils alone, without dragging in Darwin's theory at all. From his fossils and fossil skeletons he set to work to prove the extreme age of the earth and of life upon the earth, and to prove, also, that the line of descent was unbroken across the aeons from the lowest to the highest. To this line of descent there was no possible testimonial evidence. The scientist must rely entirely on the evidences of descent and transmutation which had been left here upon this bank and shoal of time.

In one famous essay he riddled the Genesis poem of creation by pointing out that there could not possibly be any human testimony to the facts and, furthermore, that the circumstantial evidence of the record of the rocks so completely contradicted Genesis that the story didn't have a leg to stand on, except in terms of folk-lore poetry.

But it was not Huxley that I was reminded of by the phrase "corpus delicti." In the case now in the newspapers the police had made an arrest on a combination of testimonial and circumstantial evidence. The judge, however, ordered the arrested man released on the old criminal law ruling that there was no "corpus delicti"—no body discovered. No body, no crime.

Memory carries me back to a little book published in the late '90s, called "The Strange Schemer of Middlebury Mass." It was written, first book, by one Melville Davison Post, who was to become the most interesting writer of murder, mystery and detective stories in America. Post was a Virginia lawyer, whose brain worked on all 12 cylinders.

Thus first book of his dealt with an evil genius of the law one Randolph Mason, a disbarred lawyer, who determined to use the law to thwart the law and so reap a fortune for himself. It is possible that the idea may have been suggested to Post by the new kind of "corporate lawyer," who was engaged, round the turn of the century, in driving coach and four through the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. But Mason's inventions were all in the field of criminal law.

No Body to Prove Crime

In the story called "The Corpus Delicti" he helped a young man, who was about to get married, to get rid of a former sweetheart. He counselled the young man step by step in the commission of a cold-blooded murder and in the disposition of the body. The man, disguised, walked out of the house into the arms of the police. All the circumstantial evidence was present, a presumption of guilt was overwhelming, but Mason's invention for the accused, pleaded the non-existence of the "corpus delicti," and freed his client.

And to rub it in, Mr. Post sprinkled his story with footnotes giving actual decisions in American state courts. More recently acted stories may have upset them now, but 30 years ago contention was that these stories were legally correct.

There was another story about a child's kidnapping, if I remember, which involved the definition of forgery and the legal liability of a promise. There was one in which a casually rather robbed his partner of that one's share of the business—without any legal redress. And all of them were set forth with chapter and verse of actual court decisions and actual legislative statutes in American law.

Melville Davison Post only wrote one or two books about the brilliant and lawless Mason. I suppose that his material ran dry. Then he invented another chapter, Uncle Abner, another Virginia lawyer, and with him as hero published a large number of volumes full of fascinating stories of crime, mystery, the vengeance of the law.

The "Father Brown" Stories

With Post the chief interest did not lie in ingenious devices. He is the only American writer of this kind of fiction, who like Gilbert Keith Chesterton, was interested chiefly in the psychological, the philosophical and the theological aspects of crime. You will remember Chesterton's "Father Brown," the priest turned detective, who was Chesterton's symbol of God. He was the divine detective, who saw that affairs which seemed dreadful on the surface were in fact harmless and innocent, while matters which often seemed most innocent were black with guilt. Chesterton's priest treated crime not as infraction of the law but as a defiance of God. So did Post's Uncle Abner.

Instead of being a Catholic priest, he was an old-fashioned Presbyterian Calvinist, whose interest was in reconciling redemption and free-will. Nowhere in human life, of course, does that puzzle so demand solution as in stories of crime, particularly major crime involving human life. In such dilemmas Post found his subjects, particularly in cases where what might seem accident or chance upset the cunningest plans of the cleverest men and women. In such accidents the Presbyterian Uncle Abner saw the hand of God. But meanwhile he had been bringing to the problem a mind of reason; his knowledge of the law, of human psychology, of the history of the neighborhood, of natural science, had all been employed on the puzzle.

But when the story was completed you felt that Uncle Abner was no ordinary detective, no mere intellectual amusing himself. He was an instrument of Omnipotence, one of those bounds of hell, whom the ancient Greeks called the Furies, servants of Zeus, whose business it was to hunt down the guilty. And so Mr. Post's Uncle Abner stories, written for the idle magazine reader, had been something of the murky splendor, the gloomy majesty of "The Furies" of Aeschylus.

For the heart of man hasn't changed much between the days of Aeschylus and the days of Melville Davison Post.

Newtonville Builder Testified He Paid Medford Banker Big Sums for Cash Advances

Under direct examination of Robert T. Bushnell, representing Bank Commissioner Guy in his suit against Edwin T. McKnight and 22 other officers and directors of the closed Medford Trust Co., David R. Sigel, Newtonville builder, declared today that he had given McKnight $50,000 for obtaining loans for him from the Medford Trust Co.

Sigel was the first witness called to the stand and Bushnell immediately thrust at him questions relating to his dealings with McKnight. "How much did he secure from you personally? A—Yes. A—$50,000."

When questioned regarding the purchase of the Hotel Dunbar, Sigel said he had made the purchase before he had ever obtained a loan from the Medford Trust Company. Sigel said that his first loan from the Medford Trust Company was taken in the name of his wife on February 1, 1927, and was for $20,000.

HERO AND BOY SAVED IN PLYMPTON POND

BERNARD CARNEY AND HIS RESCUE HOOK. Five-year-old Charles P. Priest of 52 Exchange st., Waltham, is in Waltham Hospital suffering from shock as the result of his unintentional dip into Plympton's pond when he tried to save his toy cart which had run down a little incline into the water. Among those who were nearby and heard the cries of young Priest was Bernard Carney of Waltham. Bernard, who you see with a long boat hook, pulled the younger boy to safety. In the meantime, John Carney, brother of Bernard, called an ambulance. Doctors say boy will recover.

WATCH THEIR HOME BURN

John J. Fahy, 70, of Lexington, Mass., Waltham, saved the life of Charles P. Priest, five, of Exchange st., Waltham, at Plympton pond yesterday by the use of a long pole.

First aid measures applied by policeman made the life of the child, according to doctors at the Waltham Hospital, where the boy was reported today as out of danger.

The child had been playing on the bank of the pond when his cart rolled away from him and into the water. In his attempt to retrieve it, the boy fell into the water and would have drowned had not Fahy, aroused by the cries of other boys come to the rescue with a long pole. By means of the pole the elderly storekeeper pulled the boy out of the water.

Two "padlock bandits" believed to be repeating a robbery of a chain store in Cambridge were arrested today by inspectors Breen and Barrett on charges of larceny and forgery.

The Cambridge welfare boy charged Miss Burke received a check for $25 in which to pay rent for her home on June 1, at which time Burke was employed, was paying the rent. Burke is charged with forging the check and with the check and cashing it.

The same procedure was followed in the case of a check for $25 which was cashed on Aug. 4 when another welfare check for $25 was given to Miss Burke.

The couple were taken before Judge Greene in Salem District court, and their case continued at 10 o'clock to the police who will try to trace the man who will be charged with the check and cashing it.

PLAY TO GRAND STAND CHARGED BY SILVERMAN

Police Report of Family With $80 Weekly Income Getting Aid Is Scoffed

Charlene Police Commissioner Hultman with playing to the "grandstand," Corp. Counsel Samuel Silverman today criticized Hultman's delay in forwarding his report of allegedly fraudulent welfare cases to the welfare department.

At the same time Silverman refused to let police charge that a family receiving aid has members earning $80 a week asserted.

"I have no faith in any of these unofficial reports circulated by police officials. They don't mean a thing to me."

COULD CASE BE DAILED

"It is unfortunate if Commissioner Hultman has already discovered fraudulent welfare cases that he does not turn them over to the welfare department for immediate action."

These cases are frauds they are costing the city money daily and there should be no delay in forwarding them to the proper authorities. There is no need for a grandstand report by the police commissioner.

"If such money are available the welfare department should have them right away so that they can be taken care of in the best way. There is no reason why money should be wasted if it is being used."

WEST END FAMILY

The family of a man living at 10 Myrtle st., West End, who was killed while a car was being driven by him, was reported today as out of danger.

The case will be reported by Hultman to Acting Mayor Edward M. Gallagher in a few days it was said.

Although Gallagher belittled the forthcoming report of Hultman on the fire case, he said, it is known as a case of insurance fraud. The case is being investigated by the police.

When one of Captain Connors' men, who was investigating the case, was asked if it was being used, he said: "No comment is necessary."

Tuesday night, at the opening of "Ballyhoos of 1932," which I find highly amusing in spots, tenuous and entertaining as it may be, and which I am sure will be enjoyed by many, I am still slumping since the days when it was my paid duty to study each newcoming theatrical venture and report faithfully my reactions, for upon perusing the reviews of the town's dramatic critics or their assistants, I learn that most of them considered the show sort of stuff.

Standing up again the wall in the rear, I spot Russell Patterson, one of co-makers of the production, and ponder upon the veracity of our modern young men, for here is an illustrator who has made magazine designs, designed stage sets, and even directed some rather shrewd theatrical producer, which brings to mind Heywood Brown, a columnist, who'd rather produce, and Edie Riano, a cartoonist, who'd rather produce and act, and Eddie Warner, a comedian, who'd rather produce and act. The President of the audience accidentally catches glimpses of Barney Bellamy, Villager and bon vivant, to say nothing of excellent satirist, and it is with a feeling of the keenest remorse that I remember it has been months since I've paid Barney attention—on the stage or in the street.

On Friday morning—productive mornings, they were, too, when Barney Bellamy has travelled, but he has observed, when Barney observes, he forms opinions and translates them.

In Lindy's Wednesday note...None, obviously having heard among Jack Pearl's old acquaintances was that of having at least been in the area in 1934. The note was signed "Linda" and was a copy of a response, struts emptying out his pockets—in pants, vest and shirt, and out tumbles a river of coins all denominations including that too, a quarter. "I'm not sure," she writes, "if it is the coin of a pebble—about an inch long—and confides that it's his most treasured possession; he had it since his third grade in school..." She confesses, too, that at night, in complete darkness, he has secret buttons on his pajama pockets as his coins wait out during the night...Early Thursday morning, in the Mission District, pretty close to the old City Hall, Lindy's note says that she is the only one of the trio brought here by Zig Zelig, a California who is still unwound. As I told you, the other two were Virginia and I. I was in the car with the two of them, and out of the Capitol Theater—Sophie Tucker and Bessie Mae, making traffic...Saturday night in Harlem...A visit to Tillie's was the first time that I saw her. The Curse of Being Beautiful! But Try and Convince Modern Girls of It

THE FATAL GIFT OF BEAUTY!
Every girl-child has heard the phrase of foreboding—and it's gone into one shellie-krae and out at the other. For try and convince girl children that beauty is not nature's greatest gift to them—try and do it!

For instance that unfortunate life which we call beauty, has an untimely way of coming. Some fair complexion, blue eyes, those physical beauties, may come and not a blessing, but a curse, may be the result. The reminder of the fatality of beauty, both to its possessor and to the men who worship her, was conveyed by Mary Dougherty's fascinating recent analysis in the Boston American of the parallel between the lovely faces and the untimely fates of Jean Harlow, Hollywood's famous burlesque blond, and Lillian Hellman, Broadway's equally famous French actress.

For the fact is, that beauty is a fatal gift, and it is a gift which is not always wisely bestowed. Daily True Story "Jungle Code"

TWO MEN strode along a jungle path, a path made by the only break in an impenetrable mass of thickets. A few creepers together by jungle creepers. Creepers that had gradually made their way up the broad trunks of the single giants, to entwine the branches above into an equally impenetrable mass.

DRAMAS OF MARRIED LIFE

by Eva Greely

JANE LOOKS TERRIBLY RUN-DOWN. SHE REALLY WORKS TOO HARD. THE WAY SHE SLAVES OVER A WASHBOARD! NO WONDER SHE'S NEVER ABLE TO GO OUT WITH HER HUSBAND. AND HE LIKES GOOD TIMES SO—I MUST TELL HER ABOUT RINSO. THAT WILL CUT HER WORK IN TWO.

Rinso saves time and work for millions of women every washday. Cup up, for this famous "no-work" soap—saves twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps—saves in hardest work. Saves clothes—saves hands. Rinso is safe for your finest cottons and linens—saves the color. That's why it is recommended by the makers of leading washing machines. And Rinso does away with the bands—they don't get that red, worn look. That's why millions of women will use nothing else for their washing. Rinso disappears, as if by magic, in these creamy Rinso mugs. Get the BIG package of Rinso today. It's economical—a little goes so far.

Maine Turns Thumbs Down on Hoover's Alibis for Failure

"As goes Maine so goes the country."

The voters of Maine have spoken, and in no uncertain tones. For the first time in eighty years this rock-ribbed Republican stronghold has elected a Democratic Governor. This State, first in the Union to go dry sixty years ago, sends two WET Democrats to Congress in its delegation of three.

The figures are most impressive. They reflect, as nothing else could, the extent to which the Republican party has been held upon its party membership.

While signs multiply, throughout the country, of the depth and sweep of the Democratic tide against the Hoover administration, the result in Maine affords the first specific evidence of its actual extent.

President Hoover, disdainful political debate, fruitlessly sent Ogden L. Mills, his chief alibi, out to spread calumny against Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The administration propaganda holds that every good development in recent years is attributable to the G. O. P., whereas every untoward event is the result of uncontrollable accidents. This might be called the ALIBI school of political philosophy.

Mr. Hoover ordered his campaign BALI YHOO ARTIST to Maine to undo the fine work which Mr. Roosevelt had accomplished in his recent brilliant addresses. Mr. Mills tried to ridicule Governor Roosevelt, but the normally Republican State of Maine, reflecting the nation-wide resentment over the incompetence of the Hoover administration, turned THUMBS DOWN on Mr. Mills' party for the first time in eighteen years.

The Maine election constituted a response to such BUNCOMBE as this, with which Mr. Mills conducted his Portland speech:

"In a world-wide storm, with our own structure shaken to the foundation and with many of our best men frightened and laying their heads, you must visualize the head of our nation, with courage undaunted, with unlimited faith, with a tenacity that refused to recognize defeat, with industry that recognized no rest, with resourcefulness that has no equal, and with the vision of a President as been seen in Lincoln, steadfastly steering the ship that carries the destiny of our nation to safe harbor."

"Tempered as only adversity can temper, tried as only responsibility can try, with that knowledge, experience and character that come only from wrestling with apparently insoluble problems, could any man be better equipped to lead a nation in a period of trial? If he were not President today, to whom but Herbert Hoover would you turn?"

Mr. Plain Voter might check up on Mr. Mills by asking: "Since when are failure in office, habitual wrong diagnosis of conditions and false prophecies the test of eminent fitness for office?"

The political upset in Maine was an indication that such questions are in the minds of the voters. It is no reason to believe that the people of Iowa, North Dakota, California, New York or the other great commonwealths which supported Hoover four years ago will be seduced by Mr. Mills' sophistry to repeat their blunder.

THE MAINE REBUFF CONSTITUTED AN AMERICAN ANSWER TO THE ADMINISTRATION'S EFFORT TO COVER UP FAILURE IN OFFICE WITH SPECIOUS ARGUMENT.

Maine is against the hypocrisy of the prohibition law and has elected candidates committed to its repeal.

It is against inflated speculation and make-believe prosperity.

It perceives the neglect of the destitute and unemployed by the present Republican administration.

It resents President Hoover's preoccupation with the rescue of mismanaged financial institutions and bank-ridden railroads, and his indifference to the needs of the farmer, the artisan and the people of the country as a whole.

It is the average man who has made himself heard in the Maine election—the man of plain and honest aspiration. DEMOCRACY—patient and long-enduring Democracy—is at last ON THE MARCH. A mighty phalanx of States will soon move into line. MAINE IS ONLY THE FIRST.

Imitations Are Bad

A hold-up man who uses an imitation gun is guilty of just as serious a crime as if his weapon were a real one, a New York judge has held. He sentenced a man taking a cigarette case in a hold-up to a term of years in State Prison.

Which brings up many interesting points. Suppose that a woman, seeking a husband, should employ imitation smiles, false hair, false teeth and other imitations which to beguile him—she not guilty of obtaining a husband under false pretenses?

Or, take the book agent who by gentle persuasion and high-pressure salesmanship induces us to buy a set of something or other on the installment plan—he is not guilty of using imitation lightning rod sales talk? So what?

Or the actor who imitates Lionel Barrymore and draws a salary therefor—isn't he guilty of something?

Of course, all imitations are bad. One should always buy the advertised article.

But it is good to know that a precedent has been set regarding the use of imitations. Maybe we are advancing another stage in the science of civilization.

Now if only someone will do something about the haberdashery clerk who says: "It's the finest shirt in the store; I wear them myself." Say, life will take on a brighter and rosier hue indeed.

And She Was Our Friend!

Protesting against payment of war debts, La Liberté, influential Paris daily, says:

"Americans are the only race which passed directly from barbarism to democracy without knowing civilization."

If France, our good friend whom we saved from annihilation, is permitted to weigh out of her debt to this country, it could be said in truth that America was the only race which passed from infantile simplicity to senile idiosyncrasy without knowing sanity or common sense.

"So Goes the Nation!"

ENRIGHT

In bygone days when Dear Old Maine
Went strongly G. O. P.
It was a sort of weather vane
That all the world might see.
The cheerful Pachyderm arose
And trampled on the Donkey's toes.
"For that's the way the nation goes,"
He chortled in his glee.

Old-Time Barkers

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Broadway after the diversion of the old-time barker at his barkiest these days. Not even the inimitable whippersnappers of the cooched-dance speller are being neglected. And most of the exhibits, like the cooched dance, offer nothing but the ballyhoo.

One grand theater of a decade ago is fanned in vivid red tints: "Living Figures in Sex Madras." It is a slick bit of old-time Barnum showmanship. Analyze it and you mean nothing. In fact, you learn that a fourth-rate type of burlesque show is in continuous uniform.

Scantly dressed corymbes smile unconcernedly, often chewing gum, across stage. They are the "living figures in sex madras." At intervals there is the familiar "strip act." When the customer realizes he has been duped, he exits sheepishly and praises the performance to trick his friends.

Much patronage is inspired by the sucker, egging on the prospective sucker. No one admits being "sold." The "Salon" is Art is an ornate garishly decorated grotto, starting with its array of painted nudes outside. Inside it is about as exciting as the chariot race at the flea circus.

But there's no disappointment in the honey-lipped, twinkling-eyed barker. He is there with all his gay 50 pomp, roached hair, gold-tipped cane, paste diamond ring, over-Niagara mustache, cooing: "Show now going on! The sensation of two continents. Step this way—yanking the yokels as easily as I did in your barge and mine."

I confess to suspicion of a choke over this throb in a letter from Jack Carr: "I knew there must be a depression, and have since the time she was an investment house bond widow. God bless her trustful soul. Scrimped and saved for years that she might never be a burden, but walk independently through the twilight years. As though she could possibly be a burden. There must be some good in this awful depression if it brings mothers like that back to their homes."

On Lexington, the 50's this morning I met a friend of long ago window shopping. He said that until now he had never seen a car in auto or taxi for a period of 15 years. "I'm broke now," he explained, "and have since the war." And, in departing, he called over his shoulder: "Say, you haven't seen nothing, unless you've proved about a 5 and 10." He's the same fellow who used to look bored at exciting first nights in other days.

A shop on Lexington, too, has a reputation 54 years of age. Her owner says she will take to no one save a policeman. It occurred to me—and it's a frail pun at best—

The Pachyderm is ruined now,
A wreck from tail to trunk.
The Camel droops with battered brow,
A hopeless heap of junk.
Defiantly the Donkey blows
A scornful snicker at his foes:
"If that's the way the nation goes,
The G. O. P. is sunk."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

If I Dish It Out?

EXASPERATING JOB?—writing a column like this! How I'd like to bust it wide open; tell the truth as I find it; give you the works! And what a grand thing it would be if you would let me! I dish it out.

Not just a grand thing for me to get my own way—but a grand thing for you, in helping you to broaden and deepen your own life. For whether you agree with me or not, you would be forced to face new conditions, to consider new attitudes, and even if you were right and I were wrong, you'd be a bigger and better person if you would consent to a good-natured, free-for-all battle.

But nine times out of ten, you won't. Here is what actually happens:

On Monday, for instance, I discuss child labor. Child labor being one of my pet aches I get plenty of mail about it. I bring up a lot of unpleasant statistics. I tell Uncle Sam what I think of him for letting child labor continue in these United States. In short, I write a scorching letter.

And that's just what you, too, don't like child labor, either. You, too, are ashamed because it exists in America. And the madder I get on that subject, the more you like it. But the next day I probably tell you about the community nurseries in Russia. Now, the very mention of Russia burns you up, and the idea of a community nursery violates your most cherished sentiments. So what do you do? Do you put aside your prejudices and decide to learn a few new facts, whether you like 'em or not? Or do you embrace this opportunity to get into a friendly two-fronted debate?

No indeed! Chances are, you write me a furious and anonymous letter, telling me that I am a dangerous radical and "ought to be deported with the rest of the Reds."

The average reader doesn't want to be bothered with such things as INFORMATION, not even when it's his own pet notion, and the columnist who doesn't give it to him is just out of luck. But, of course, that isn't the way the average reader puts it to himself. Here's how he puts it:

"What does this guy mean by writing all this nonsense? I'm not so old-fogey. I'm as willing to learn new tricks as anyone. But this stuff is plain haywire. There's not a word of sense in it. None of the nice people I know says things like that. I've been around, too, but I've never seen such things as this writer describes. They've never happened to any people I know. I don't believe this writer has ever seen them happen, either. He's just trying to show off."

"Well, I don't think much of smartness like that—people who earn their money by trying to shock sensible readers."

And so the average reader grinds the phone and talks it over with Lou, and then sits down and writes the editor of this paper and tells him exactly what he thinks of that Elsie Robinson. And all because he thinks "I'm a sensible person."

meanwhile, simply HIS idea of sense! And it's queer, America wasn't even at new ideas; chewed them out as the corner grocery; "rashed" them out of the weekly L. C. Debating Club. And the more money the ideas were, the more we liked them. But we like Great American Public utilities and popular writers to say it-with-kisses, or not at all.

Wonder how? Have we grown too stupid or too lazy to think? Are we so stuck-up we can't bear to see a notion that challenges our own, or hear of a situation that puts us on the spot? Or are we just "raid-cits—scared to read things that might shake us out of our pipe dreams?"

I pass. What do YOU think? Do you, or don't you, like to read ideas with which you can't agree? WHEN I DISH IT OUT, DO YOU TAKE IT?

OR DO YOU RUN CRY-BABY TO THE EDITOR AND TELL HIM I OUGHTER QUIT!

Three Fears

Nothing to fear save bitterness
And envy and crime shame.

And whether the purse hold more or less
These terrors stay the same.

For loss may be a friend disguised
Like rains which drench the soil.

And though the luxuries are prized
The best joys come from toil.

And so let's face the coming year
And bravely play the game.

We're only these three things to fear:
Bitterness, envy, shame!

We'll play the game with heads erect,
Come, failure or success,
No shame in us shall men detect,
Nor envy nor bitterness.

Ogden Mills: Voice of the Plutocracy

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

OGDEN MILLS, who never personally or politically has given a thought to him, has finally discovered the "forgotten man"—and that is big news! He has never thought of him at any stage during the most devastating panic in our history, when the ranks of the jobless were swelling to the enormous figure of 11,000,000. He had no thought of him when he blackballed the Republican Convention into the acceptance of the Hoover platform, which utterly ignores him. He cares nothing for him now. He never has; and men of his type never will.

But Roosevelt has introduced the "forgotten man" to Ogden Mills; and he actually mentions him in his Portland speech. The "forgotten man" never would have been mentioned in this campaign but for Roosevelt's speech.

There are 11,000,000 jobless men who have been stubbornly ignored by Mills and Hoover for three long years of human misery.

There are thirty million more of forgotten men and women dependent on the jobless, for the provision of whose starvation Mills and Hoover stubbornly insisted not one penny of Federal money should be contributed.

There are thirty million farmers who are bankrupt, or on the verge of bankruptcy, who have been forgotten by the Administration.

And these have votes. Because Ogden Mills knows that ordinary intelligence and self-interest in these forgotten men and women would impel them to vote for a change in the governmental attitude toward them, he has discovered them.

He remembers them sixty days before election; he will again forget them the day after.

Mills impudent to mention prejudices.

The most impudent suggestion in the Mills speech is that we cannot afford to remove our prejudices at the polls.

Had not the Hoover High Command, which included Ogden Mills, specialized in 1928 in mobbing religious and racial prejudices in the interest of Mr. Hoover, everyone knows that Al Smith would have been elected.

Unless, by working the other side of the street now, this same Hoover High Command can again mobilize prejudices by a similar campaign, it is to be hoped by the same people who vent the limit in 1928, everyone knows Mr. Roosevelt will be elected.

That is the reason Moses—notorious for his part in the campaign of prejudice four years ago—is sent out by Ogden Mills and his group to create prejudices to maintain Mr. Hoover, the beneficiary of the slandering campaign of 1928, in power. Mr. Mills made an error in mentioning the word "prejudices." It is the one hope on which he relies for a Hoover victory.

"General Staff"

Changes Demanded

One must be driven to desperate straits when he argues that since a victory for Roosevelt would mean four months of inactivity between the election and the induction of the new Administration into office, there should be no change. By that argument there never should be a change in the political complexion or the policies of the Government. By that token elections would be meaningless.

Stand fast, say no change! Mr. Mills answers:

"It is not simply a question of changing the commander-in-chief, but of bringing the major and vital elements of the colonial and the entire general staff."

That is the very thing that appeals most powerfully to the man who has been persistently forgotten. The commander-in-chief has led us to ruin. His incapacity, for leadership, his procastinations, his blunders have been generally conceded. And who are the members of the general staff? The forgotten man must not supplant!

Just Read Names of "General Staff"

There is Charles Curtis, the bone-dry prohibitionist, who stands four-square openly for the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act.

There is Secretary Stimson, who deliberately or blunderingly has put us in the spot in the matter of the debt.

There is Ogden Mills, who thinks entirely in terms of money and bonds and big money, and who wants to transfer the debts to American taxpayers in the interest of the international bankers.

There is Secretary Hurley, who says the jobless must "shift for themselves," and who was commander-in-chief of the tanks and bayonets that drove veterans from the capital of the nation for which they had fought.

There is Secretary Lament, who says it is gratifying that the jobless are hungry, because it will strengthen their characters.

There is Secretary Hyde, who says the jobless are to "use the country" during their enforced idleness by fish and hunt, and the farmer as a cop of Dante's Inferno.

There is Dr. Julius Klein, whose ludicrous misrepresentation of conditions continued until its literally was laughed into being.

What a tragic thing it would be to supplant these members of the "General Staff!"

Assails Roosevelt for Aiding People

And Mr. Mills makes an attack on Roosevelt's position and what grounds? He states them:

"The Governor would regulate the stock market, he would control the issuance of securities and provide for greater securities in connection with security issues; he would control the issuance of commercial and investment securities; he would supervise the supervision of banks; and he would propose to restrict our Federal Reserve."

No, gentle reader, that, in the end of the "general staff" of the Hoover regime, is looked upon as an indictment! Have you any objection to having these policies for the protection of the people put in operation? Think that over. Mr. Mills says you are to vote against them by supporting Mr. Hoover.

Again Mr. Mills lets the cat out of the bag when he denounces Roosevelt because he is "opposed to cancellation of the debts." That paragraph without knowing that the Administration is committed to the transfer of eleven billions in debts to the backs of American taxpayers.

Mr. Mills has never met the "forgotten man." He has merely heard of him through Roosevelt. He has an sympathy with him and never had. He is one voice of the Hoover regime.
